

Dartmouth College

Commencement Exercises

*SUNDAY JUNE TWELFTH
NINETEEN HUNDRED EIGHTY-EIGHT*

HANOVER NEW HAMPSHIRE

The Academic Procession

Individuals who are to receive degrees, as well as faculty members and certain administrators, march in the academic procession.

First comes the Platform Group, led by the Dean of the College, the President, and the Provost. The Dean serves as Chief Marshal for the Commencement; and should the Governor of New Hampshire, as an ex officio Trustee, be present, he marches with the President.

Immediately behind them comes the Bezaleel Woodward Fellow, acting as Usher to the Board of Trustees and bearing Lord Dartmouth's Cup. (The cup, long an heirloom in the possession of succeeding Earls of Dartmouth, was presented to the College by the ninth Earl on the occasion of the College's Bicentennial celebration in 1969.)

The Trustees of the College are, as a group, next in the marching order, followed immediately by the Vice President for Finance, in his capacity as the College's ceremonial Steward. (The Steward carries a canister containing a copy of the royal charter granted to Dartmouth on December 13, 1769, by King George III.)

The intended recipients of honorary degrees, each escorted by a member of the College faculty and the group preceded by one of the Platform Marshals, come next. They are followed, in turn, by a second marshal, who leads the remainder of the Platform Group, which includes Vice Presidents, Deans of the Professional Schools, and Chaplains of the College.

Members of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences and of the Professional Schools, led by appropriate marshals, come next. The faculty sit in bleacher seats on either side of the platform.

Finally, the A.B. degree recipients march up the main aisle to seats in the center section. Graduate students proceed up the side aisles and sit in sections to the left and right of the Seniors.

In the Recessional, all groups march out in the same order in which they entered.

Let us with a gladsome mind
Praise the Lord for He is kind;
For His mercies aye endure,
Ever faithful, ever sure.

He with all commanding might
Filled the new-made world with light;
Let us blaze His name abroad
For of gods He is the God.

Let us therefore chorus forth
His high majesty and worth;
For His mercies aye endure,
Ever faithful, ever sure.

SINGING OF DARTMOUTH UNDYING

The audience is requested to rise and join in the singing

Dartmouth! There is no music for our singing,
No words to bear the burden of her praise;
Yet how can we be silent and remember
The splendor and the fullness of her days,
Who can forget her soft September sunsets?
Who can forget those hours that passed like dreams?
The long cool shadows floating on the campus,
The drifting beauty where the twilight streams?

Who can forget her sharp and misty mornings,
The clanging bells, the crunch of feet on snow,
Her sparkling noons, the crowding into Commons,
The long white afternoons, the twilight glow?
See! By the light of many thousand sunsets
Dartmouth Undying like a vision starts:
Dartmouth, the gleaming, dreaming walls of Dartmouth,
Miraculously builded in our hearts!

XVII

SINGING OF THE ALMA MATER

The audience is requested to rise and join in the singing

Dear old Dartmouth, give a rouse
For the college on the hill!
For the Lone Pine above her,
And the loyal ones who love her,
Give a rouse, give a rouse, with a will!
For the sons of old Dartmouth,
For the daughters of Dartmouth,
Though 'round the girdled earth they roam,
Her spell on them remains;
They have the still North in their hearts,
The hill-winds in their veins,
And the granite of New Hampshire
In their muscles and their brains.

Dear old Dartmouth, set a watch
Lest the old traditions fail!
Stand as sister stands by brother!
Dare a deed for the old Mother!
Greet the world, from the hills, with a hail!
For the sons of old Dartmouth,
For the daughters of Dartmouth,
Around the world they keep for her
Their old undying faith;
They have the still North in their soul,
The hill-winds in their breath;
And the granite of New Hampshire
Is made part of them till death.

Historical Notes on the Commencement

This brief and colorful history of The Dartmouth College Commencement was written by the late Professor Francis Lane Childs, Class of 1906. The section on Academic Attire was written by the late Secretary of the College Sidney C. Hayward, Class of 1926.

Dartmouth's first Commencement exercises were observed in 1771, just one year after Eleazar Wheelock opened his little college in Hanover. They were reported in the New Hampshire Gazette of Portsmouth for 23 September in this way: 'On Wednesday the 28th of August was held the first Commencement at Dartmouth College in this Province which was attended by His Excellency Governor Wentworth with many members of His Majesty's Council, a numerous and respectable Body of the Clergy and other Gentlemen and a Concourse of People beyond all expectation. The following Gentlemen, Messrs. John Wheelock and Samuel Gray, independent Students, and Messrs. Levi Frisbie and Sylvanus Ripley, educated for Missionaries among the remote Indians, Candidates for the first Degree, performed the appointed Exercises of the Day under the Conduct of the Reverend President Wheelock, to the entire approbation of the Honorable Trustees present and obtained the Admiration and Applause of a crowded Audience. The Exercises consisted of an elegant English Oration upon the Virtues, succeeded by an Anthem; a Philosophical Oration in Latin, a Syllogistic Disputation, and a Valedictory Oration in Latin, followed by an Anthem, composed and set to music by the young Gentlemen Candidates for a Degree.'

We learn from other sources that the exercises were begun and ended with prayer, were held in the open air near where Reed Hall now stands, on a platform of rough-hewn boards with a single plank for an ascent, and were followed by refreshments for the whole audience, consisting of an ox roasted whole on the campus and a barrel of rum, both provided by the munificence of the Governor. The four young men who received their degrees had all taken the first three years of their college course at Yale.

From this simple ceremony of more than two centuries ago the elaborate exercises of today with all their pomp and circumstance have gradually developed. The external characteristics have varied greatly over the years, but the central core for which all the rest exists, the granting of degrees, remains essentially unchanged.

The earliest Commencements were held in various and generally inadequate quarters, until the erection in 1795 of the College Church on the north side of the Green. All the Commencement exercises from 1795 to 1907 inclusive were performed in this building, but were transferred in 1908 to the then new Webster Hall. With the great expansion of the College after World War I this too could no longer accommodate the crowd, and in 1932 the exercises moved out of doors, to the beautiful tree-shaded lawn by the Bema in the College Park. When President Eisenhower accepted the College's invitation to be present at the Commencement of 1953, it was immediately foreseen that a much greater space would be needed to provide for the expected throng of visitors, and the Baker Library lawn with its easy extension onto the Green was chosen. It proved so serviceable a meeting place that all outdoor Commencements since have been held there.

From 1771 to 1834 the exercises generally took place during the last week in August, from 1835 to 1871 in July, and since 1872 in June — changes caused by modifications in the College calendar. Originally Commencement occupied but a single day, but as the College grew related activities sprang up and were assigned to the two preceding days. From 1792 the two undergraduate Literary Societies, the Theological and the Musical Societies, and the Phi Beta Kappa Society scheduled orations, concerts, and dramatic exhibitions. All were open to the public and frequently aroused greater interest than the exercises of Commencement itself. For many years members of the graduating class delivered the orations before their respective societies, but later they united in inviting a distinguished speaker from outside the College to address them. Perhaps the most celebrated of these orations was the address on 'Literary Ethics' given before the Library Societies of the College on 24 July 1838 by Ralph Waldo Emerson.

On the Sunday before Commencement the President preached the Baccalaureate Sermon to the graduating class in the College Chapel. This practice continued until the exercises of Wednesday moved in 1939 to Sunday to conform to weekend customs of the outside world. A Baccalaureate Address on Commencement Day by a distinguished recipient of an honorary degree then superseded the sermon.

Class Day was instituted by the senior class in 1854. An account of it is preserved in the journal of an undergraduate, who tells us that the exercises were held on Monday afternoon in the chapel; that after an opening prayer and music by the Woodstock Brass Band, three seniors presented, in order, an oration, a poem, and 'a very fair song called Happy have been these days, boys.' Then the class formed a procession, crossed the Green and saluted the President, 'after which they took their march to the Large Pine Tree on Observatory Hill. There they sang the hymn When shall we three meet again? While singing this, they had encircled the tree. When this was through with, each one in order took, from an evergreen wreath, a little sprig or a flower as a memento of their parting and of their four-year course in College. The procession then marched back and disbanded.' This year's Class Day is a direct descendant of that first one.

The exercises of Commencement Day itself have undergone many changes. At first the Salutatory was the highest honor, but from 1816 on the Valedictory took that place. The Salutatory was always in Latin, the Valedictory in English. The early programs included orations, disputations, and dialogues, the last often expanding to several speakers and taking on a dramatic form. In 1793 a dialogue on 'The Trial of Louis XVI' required the use of ten speakers. The orations for half a century gave opportunity for the seniors to display their accomplishments in the languages. In 1807 the program listed orations in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Chaldaic, and French, and six in English. The oration in French on 'The Degeneracy of Modern Italy' was given by George Ticknor, later to win fame at Harvard as the first professor of modern languages in America. The last Greek oration was delivered in 1849; the Salutatory continued to be spoken in Latin until 1897.

The number of speeches ranged from ten to twenty during the early part of the nineteenth century, but increased after 1825. In 1835 President Nathan Lord, imbued with the curious notion 'that ambition and emulation are selfish principles, and therefore immoral,' abolished all competitions, ranks, and honors for students, and decreed that since there was no longer any recognition of honors, every member of the class must take part in the Commencement exercises, delivering a ten-minute oration on an assigned subject. Forty-eight such speeches were given that year, the exercises lasting all day, with an hour's intermission at noon. The result was what might have been expected: the audience was exhausted and bored, and, as one reporter noted, the exercises 'did no credit to either the class or the College.' After four years of this, a measure of relief was found by assigning parts to only one half of the class, chosen by lot! This was still too long, wearisome, and fruitless, but it continued throughout Lord's administration. After his resignation in 1863, the assignment of honors and careful selection of speakers were promptly resumed. The number of speakers was gradually reduced to six in 1898, to four, then three in the 1920s, and one in 1939, chosen by the Commencement Committee. That speech is entitled 'Valedictory to the College.'

The official language of Commencement until 1827 was Latin, and all announcements were made in that language. Even the English orations were introduced as in lingua vernacula. On one occasion President John Wheelock announced loudly 'Musica expectatur!'

Nothing happened, and he repeated it twice with increasing emphasis, then staring at the unresponsive band shouted 'Play up!' Until 1892 the president retained the custom of conferring all degrees in Latin; since then he has used a dignified English translation. The first honorary degrees were conferred in 1773, and with few exceptions have been bestowed in all succeeding years.

Music has always been part of the exercises. Through the eighteenth century anthems and other pieces of sacred music were introduced into the program to break the monotony of speeches. After its organization, the Musical Society of the College provided the vocal selections. Instrumental accompaniment soon followed, but not until 1805 was a band for marching employed. Later the band also furnished concerts during Commencement week and dance music for the ball on Commencement evening.

Milton's Paraphrase of Psalm CXXXVI, sung to the tune of Nuremberg, was first used at a Dartmouth Commencement in 1895, at the suggestion of President Tucker, 'as a stately but choral piece of psalmody that seemed to fit the early history of the College.' It has since been sung at every Commencement except two. The custom of singing part of Richard Hovey's 'Men of Dartmouth' near the close of the exercises dates from 1910.

The academic procession has always been one of the interesting and important features of Commencement. The order of march during the first half-century, with some variations, consisted of the undergraduates, the candidates for degrees, two and two, the beadle alone, bearing a white staff, the President alone in his official robes, the Trustees, the Faculty, the Reverend Clergy, Gentlemen of Liberal Education, and 'other respectable characters.' Forming at the president's house (later at the Chapel), the procession marched about the Green and entered the auditorium between the split ranks of the students. After the Civil War the undergraduates no longer attended the ceremonies, the seniors alone forming the split ranks, and the line of march was lengthened at its end by the numerous alumni present, headed by the fifty-year class.

The president's official robes, worn at every Commencement, consisted of the traditional cap and gown, although President Lord substituted for the cap a tall, shiny, black silk hat, which he kept on during the conferring of degrees. The president's special insignia at Commencement since 1785 has been a badge of office, originally called a 'jewel,' worn suspended by a silver chain around his neck. This medal is elliptical in shape, measuring nearly 5 inches by 3 inches. Its face is a rounded surface of beaten gold, beautifully wrought, enclosed by a raised beaded border of silver. At the top is engraved the sun, and below, in high relief, four human figures representing the fable of the old man and his three sons with the bundle of sticks, and the aphorism, 'Unanimity is the strength of society.' The back of the badge is of plain silver, bearing a heraldic shield above this inscription: 'The Gift of JOHN FLUDE, BROKER, Gracechurch Street, London, 5th April, 1785, TO the PRESIDENT of DARTMOUTH COLLEGE, for the time being at Hanover in the STATE OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.'

Another historic item is the Wentworth Bowl, presented by the Governor of the Province of New Hampshire, his Excellency John Wentworth, at the first Dartmouth Commencement in 1771. The silver bowl was given to President Eleazar Wheelock on that occasion, to be handed down to 'his Successors in that Office.' The Wentworth Bowl is of the 'monteith' type with a scalloped rim, made in Boston by Daniel Henchman and engraved by Nathaniel Hurd. These two Yankee craftsmen were friends of Paul Revere in silver work. The Wentworth Bowl has often been used by the President of the College and his wife for serving punch on ceremonial occasions of Commencement. Small replicas of the bowl are now presented each year by the Alumni Council of the College to outstanding alumni, as the Dartmouth Alumni Award.

At the first three Commencements, when Governor Wentworth was present, the beadle, later called the marshal, was the High Sheriff of the Province, from Portsmouth. Subsequently his duty was performed by an upper-ranking officer of the Militia, and from 1820 to 1844 by the High Sheriff of Grafton County, a resplendent figure with cocked hat and sword, gold lace and sash. In recent years the Dean of the College has served as head marshal, with a retinue of assistants from the Faculty.

The original wearing of gowns by members of the Faculty at Commencement continued until about 1820, and occasionally for some time thereafter. The custom then fell into disuse, not to be revived until 1908, when the exercises moved into Webster Hall. Then for the first time the Faculty blossomed out in full regalia, including the brilliant hoods that have since made the procession a pageant of color.

All undergraduates wore short gowns in the earliest days, but soon discarded them. The candidates for degrees thereafter dressed simply, in whatever were their best clothes, often of homespun. Students in more comfortable circumstances strove to be fashionable. Judah Dana 1795 recorded that his Commencement dress consisted of a black coat, waistcoat, and small clothes, large silver buckles, black silk gloves, and a black cocked hat, 'with my hair cued down with a black ribbon and head and hair powdered white as the driven snow.' In 1827 the speakers appeared in black silk robes hired for the occasion; in the 1830s they are reported to have worn dress coats with swallow tails; in 1840 'a black surplice gave dignity to the appearance of the speakers.' At the Commencement of 1865 the entire senior class was clothed in 'long black coats, light gray trousers, and tall silk hats.' There was no permanent uniformity of dress, however, until 1892, when the present plain bachelor's gown was adopted for all graduating classes. The red ribbons worn by some of the candidates are the insignia of membership in the honor society, Phi Beta Kappa.

From the very beginning Commencement took on for the non-College residents of the town and countryside the nature of a holiday. They enjoyed the barbecue furnished by the governor in 1771. In 1794 a local diarist noted 'On Thursday August 28 the Commencement was supplemented with a horse race.' And in the first two-thirds of the nineteenth century the inhabitants for twenty miles around celebrated Commencement in much the same manner as fall muster or the agricultural fair. On that day a huge throng packed the village to overflowing, not to listen to the academic exercises but to revel in the sights, sounds, and tastes upon the campus. The entire south end of the Green and nearly half of the sides had every available spot occupied by booths and tents, from which were dispensed all kinds of food and drink, patent medicines, knickknacks and gewgaws, soap and cologne, and an endless variety of miscellaneous articles. Jugglers, mountebanks, sideshows, and auctioneers were numerous. At the 1833 Commencement it is said there were thirty gambling places open on the Green, and twelve auctioneers shouted so loudly that they could be heard inside the meeting house during the graduation exercises. In 1835 Commencement was moved into July, a busier time for the country folk, and with strenuous efforts on the part of the authorities of both college and town, these unpleasant features were gradually eliminated. In the present century most of the noise and revelry has been of a more legitimate sort, the natural accompaniment of class reunions.

To every graduating class its own Commencement is a memorable one, but in the long history of the College five have been particularly notable. That of 1819 was marked by a dignified celebration of the happy conclusion of the Dartmouth College Case; Daniel Webster 1801 was its most distinguished guest. In 1853 an unprecedented throng gathered to hear Rufus Choate 1819 deliver his famous eulogy on Daniel Webster. The Centennial Anniversary in 1869 of the founding of the College brought to Hanover a greater number of visitors than ever before, including nearly one thousand graduates of the College from the classes of 1804 to 1868. The presiding officer was the Chief Justice of the United States, Salmon P. Chase 1826.

At the Commencement of 1953 ten thousand people were seated on the Baker Library lawn on a perfect June day to see President Dwight D. Eisenhower receive from President Dickey Dartmouth's honorary degree of Doctor of Laws and to hear his epoch-making address. Brief, forceful, and completely extemporaneous, it developed into a blockbuster of national and international importance when he came to his solemn and earnest climax: 'Don't join the book-burners! Have courage to look at the truth and fight evil with knowledge!' This little speech made banner headlines across the country, started discussion here and abroad, and elicited innumerable editorials from journalists.

The Bicentennial Year of Dartmouth College was officially opened with the Commencement celebration in June of 1969. This gained historic importance not only from the mere fact of marking the College's 200th year and the opening of its third century, but also from the participation in the exercises of the ninth Earl of Dartmouth and his Countess, who came from England to do honor to the college that bears their name. Their gracious speeches at the unveiling of the bicentennial plaque and their sincere pleasure at the bestowal by the College upon each of them of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws made evident once more the unbroken continuity of Dartmouth from its founding to the present day.

Academic Attire

The traditional pageantry of an academic procession, such as the one opening today's Commencement exercises, is one of the impressive spectacles of our time. Its significance is attested to by the array of handsome gowns and vividly colored hoods worn by members of the Faculty, the Board of Trustees, and other functionaries of the College. These display the symbols of scholarly attainment.

The earliest gowns of which illustrations exist at Oxford University somewhat resemble cassocks, which were worn by English teachers who found good use for the hood, or cowl, as protection against the weather. A uniform American system of academic heraldry indicates the level of a degree displayed by the costume; also the field of study in which it was earned, and the institution by which it was granted.

It is the hood which generally provides academic regalia its color and offers the most information about its wearer. The silk lining of the hood bears the color or colors of the degree-granting college or university; its velvet facing reveals the color assigned to the area of study. The doctor's gown may bear velvet trimming on the front and sleeves — such as dark blue for doctors of philosophy. A few institutions, mostly overseas but some in this country, authorize the wearing of colored robes, departing from the traditional black, and brightly displaying the official colors of the university. The cap and gown signifying Dartmouth's doctoral degrees have been green since 1967.

The American mortarboard, derived from the soft Oxford cap, is usually black. Its tassel, for holders of the bachelor's and master's degrees, is also usually black, although gold tassels may be worn by holders of doctoral degrees and heads of institutions. The tassel is worn on the right side of the cap by undergraduates, on the left by holders of bachelor's and higher degrees.

The edging, or facing, velvet of academic hoods, as mentioned above, indicates the area of study. The principal scholarly fields seen in the Dartmouth procession today include:

Arts, Letters, Humanities	White
Business Administration	Nugget
Economics	Copper
Education	Light Blue
Engineering	Orange
Fine Arts	Brown
including Architecture
Law	Purple
Library Science	Lemon

Medicine	Green
Music	Pink
Philosophy	Dark Blue
Physical Education	Sage Green
Public Administration	Peacock Blue
including Foreign Service
Public Health	Salmon Pink
Science	Golden Yellow
Theology	Scarlet

The colorful ceremony of awarding honorary degrees features the placing of a hood over the shoulders of the recipients. The silk lining of the Dartmouth hood is Dartmouth green, and the velvet edging corresponds to the honorary degree awarded, as listed above.
